

Paper Fortune Tellers to teach playing and hanging out skills

This paper fortune teller is for two children, or a child and an adult, to focus on options for playing and hanging out.

To make them:

- * Cut out all four sides of the perimeter of the Fortune Teller.
- * Fold them. This YouTube video shows how: <https://bit.ly/34QK6jX>. Start with the printed side down.

About using these:

Unlike traditional paper fortune tellers, these are not used for pretend fortune telling. These are for facilitating basic conversational exchange about options for playing and hanging out.

Suggested game format:

1. Person number one says, "Spell your name." For each letter, the person holding the Fortune Teller manipulates the device back and forth.
2. Person number two is then shown the two options appearing on the inner triangles. Person one says, "Pick which one you want." In the example to the right, the person picks, "Game."
3. Person one opens up the innermost flaps, where four options appear. He selects A, "What are three board games we both like?" The two players then figure out which three board games they like.
4. The players continue taking turns holding the paper fortune teller and asking the other person questions.

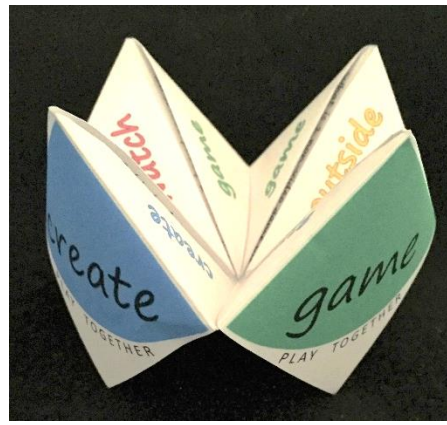

I hope you find these things useful. There are lots more of these paper fortune tellers on the website if you would like to try them.
